School Levy Must Be Renewed

TOO much emphasis cannot be placed on the absolute necessity of authorizing renewal of Marion's four-mill school levy in the voting next Tuesday.

Should it fail to get a majority vote, the schools would be without operating funds during the final 10 weeks of this school year. To make the situation more critical, should the levy not be renewed in Tuesday's balloting, it could not be submitted to the voters again until November, 1946. Thus suspension of school operation for 10 weeks would be necessitated by lack of funds.

These grim and foreboding facts are not stated because of even a faint suspicion that voters do not favor renewal of the levy. Much to the contrary, there is certainty that it has close to unanimous public approval, for there are few if any citizens who would want school operations to be seriously crippled. But that is exactly what would happen should the levy renewal fail. And so we are here directing particular attention to the levy as an extra precaution and to guard against any votes for it being lost through negligence or misunderstanding.

Bear in mind that this levy merely provides for continuance of essential revenue the schools are already receiving and will not add to the present tax rate. It has no connection with any proposals for school building construction but provides solely for the ordinary operating expenses now in effect.

All citizens who wish to help maintain Marion's educational system throughout the current school year and save it from a predicament that would interfere seriously with the training of our young people and be a disgrace to the community will allow nothing to prevent them from going to the polls and voting for the four-mill levy renewal.

3,000 Youngsters Take Part in Community Halloween Fete

By MARY HERRING
The first Halloween parade for children held here under the sponsorship of the Marion police was voted a huge success when some 3,000 school children turned out for the masquerade parade and party last night. Police and the parade judges estimated that approximately 20,000 persons lined the streets to view the parade. Long before time for the parade to start, spectators assembled along the line of march and every available parking space was filled. The parade started from Park boulevard promptly at 7 o'clock and took almost half an hour to pass.

The children were divided into three divisions with the smaller ones leading. Costumes were varied and little ones who looked too tiny to walk far were skipping along decked out in clever outfits keeping pace with older children.

Oddly Assorted Pairs
Ghouls walked with dainty ladies and tramps hobnobbed with oriental potentates. Fairies and elves went side by side with gaudy skeletons and ghosts held on to grandma's arms.

Many of the costumes were fashioned of crepe paper and even the lack of factory-made masks proved a minor drawback that the resourceful youngsters hurdled by making their own.

Some war trophies and souvenirs probably sent home by big brothers in service, could be seen in some South Sea island apparel and a few other costumes. Father's long underwear was put into use and apparently mother's rag-bag had been emptied to provide padding for the proper places.

Walking Cornstalks
Even walking cornstalks, cartoons and scarecrows were present and were so realistic that if they were still for a few minutes they could easily have been taken for the real McCoy.

Not content with parading himself, one little fellow brought his dog along. Although he had disguised the animal in a small suit of underwear, the dog had walked out of one leg and was having a bit of trouble keeping up with his long-stepping master. A little old "grandma" could be seen pedaling furiously along on a bicycle and close behind a miniature clown delighted the spectators by turning cartwheels along the street. Almost every known kind of costume could be seen and the youngsters attired for bed, one even carried a lighted candle. Uncle Sam and the Statue of Liberty were present as were members of a midwest wedding party. It wasn't safe to tap any little one on the shoulder and call him a "bummy" because it might very well be a "sister" instead. The children had taken advantage of the float prizes to deck out to HALLOWEEN, Page 27

PROPOSED CITY AIRPORT SITE APPRAISAL SET

Value of $67,500 Placed on 644 Acres by Government Officials.

An appraisal of $67,500 has been placed on the 644 acres of land in the Scioto Ordnance Plant area the city of Marion proposes to buy for a new municipal airport, Mayor Harry L. Dowler said today. The appraisal was made by government officials after the land was declared surplus by the U. S. Army.

Mayor Dowler said the appraisal now opens the way for the city to offer a bid for the purchase of the land, which is located east of Pole Lane road and north of the Erie and New York Central railroad tracks. The tract is approximately one mile square.

Can't Use Buildings
The proposed airport site is a portion of approximately 7,500 acres declared surplus by the Army Sept. 23. The land involved was appraised as agricultural property. There are no buildings suitable for use in connection with the proposed municipal airport.

As a bidder for the property the city will have a high priority, exceeded only by a federal government agency, Mayor Dowler said. The city's bid will be on an equal basis with that of any state or county agency, the mayor said. While the state of Ohio is interested in some Scioto Ordnance Plant land for use as a mental hospital, the airport site is not included in the state plans. It is expected, therefore, that the city will offer the only bid for the land.

Time Limit On Bid
The city has until Dec. 23 to submit its bid, which must at least equal the appraisal figure. The appraisal figure is considerably higher than an unofficial value set on the property by three appraisers for the city, Mayor Dowler said. The city appraisers, A. J. Loudenlager, Henry Drake and Hoover Brown, placed the value at $51,900, also on the basis of agricultural land. In making the government appraisal the city's estimates were not considered by the federal officials. At the request of city officials the site was inspected by engineers of the civil aeronautics administration and approved for use as an airport.

GALION CHILD CARE PROGRAM GETS AID

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Child care programs in 17 Ohio communities will be continued by federal aid until next March 1, a Federal Works Agency official reported yesterday.

Roland O. Ashton, division engineer for the FWA's Division Four office of the Bureau of Community Facilities, said communities which had requested extension of child care programs now operating with federal funds had been allowed the additional time to develop plans for local financing of the projects.

The Ohio communities included: Youngstown, Lima, Galion, Warren, Hamilton, Lorain, Chillicothe, Wadsworth, Springfield, Mansfield and Windham.

Tax Cut Bill Wins Senate Approval, Goes to Truman

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The senate approved the $5,920,000,000 tax reduction bill today, sending it to the White House for President Truman's signature.

The house on Tuesday had accepted the final form of the measure as worked out by senate-house conference.

It is admittedly a "quickie" bill to bridge the gap between V-J day and enactment of comprehensive post-war tax legislation.

What It Does
It will—reduce everybody's income tax, lift all income tax liability from 12,000,000 persons and give veterans special tax preference, for total individual reductions of $2,644,000,000;

Repeal the excess profits tax on corporations, along with the declared value excess profits levy and the capital stock tax, and reduced the combined normal and surtax rates on business from 2 to 4 percentage points, for a total corporate saving of $3,136,000,000;

End the "use tax" on cars and boats, reducing federal revenue by $140,000,000; and

Freeze the social security payroll tax throughout 1946 at the present rate of 1 per cent each on employers and employees.

No Change in Some
The bill make no change in the wartime excise taxes on such things as furs and cosmetics. The house had voted to set these back to their 1942 rate next July but the senate balked.

Individuals drawing salaries or wages will feel the benefits immediately after January 1. They'll have smaller tax withholdings from their pay envelopes.

Savings to individuals under the new income tax provisions are illustrated by such comparisons as these:

A married person with two dependents, salary $1,800 a year, tax under old law $39, none under new. Married man, no dependents, $7,000 income, $1,535 tax under old law, $1,292 under new. Single person, $2,500, salary, $460 old law, $360 new.

Veterans to Benefit
Veterans who served in the enlisted ranks will be forgiven all federal income taxes on their service pay from 1941 on. Officers get additional time in which to pay up their back taxes without interest.

BRITISH SAY HITLER DEATH ESTABLISHED

By The Associated Press
BERLIN, Nov. 1.—British headquarters said tonight that evidence sifted from intelligence reports shows "as conclusively as possible without the bodies" that Hitler and his mistress, Eva Braun, died last April 30 in the bunker of the Reich chancellery.

Their bodies later were burned just outside the bunker, the British intelligence reports said, even as Russian armies were applying the last touches to the conquest of Berlin.

The British report said both committed suicide, Hitler by shooting himself through the mouth and his mistress taking poison.

"After the suicide the bodies were taken to the garden outside the bunker by Goebbels (propaganda minister) and Bornmann (Martin Bornmann, deputy leader of the Nazi party) and several others, drenched with gasoline and burned," the British concluded.

Today's installment of Gen. Wainwright's story appears on Page 22.

Oddities in News
Around the State

By The Associated Press
MANSFIELD, O.—Judges of the costume contest at the Ohio State Guard's Mardi Gras here got a surprise at the unmasking when the person they chose as "the best dressed man" turned out to be a woman. The winner, Mrs. Frances Craze, received $5 worth of merchandise—from a men's shop.

CANTON — Pretty Dorothy Patterson Sayre, wife of Navy Lieutenant Arthur Sayre, is a candidate for municipal court judge. If elected on the non-partisan ballot Nov. 6, she will be the first woman judge in the city and in Stark county.

COLUMBUS—Comedian Joe E. Brown was in town recently and took time to sell some war bonds at a local department store. Asked where he had been born, the man with the big mouth replied, "Haven't you heard of Holgate?"

"Holgate," someone quipped, "isn't that the name of a college?" "Holgate," countered Joe, "is the capital of the world."

NEW LEXINGTON—Ohio has at least one veteran who won't have to go job-hunting. John C. Ferguson, prosecuting attorney of Perry county, was recently elected while serving with the Army in France, recently was discharged and assumes his duties Nov. 1.

AKRON—George W. Middour, 40, father of eight children, has reenlisted in the Army after 29 months as an airplane mechanic in the Aleutians. Middour wants to go to Germany this time.

AKRON—Mr. and Mrs. Albert Metz, formerly of McDonaldsville and Massillon, O., have been married almost 72 years and say they never have quarreled.

Two Children Injured
Near Home at Essex

Three children were struck Tuesday night at 6:15 near their home in Essex by a car driven by George Willis Dempster of La Rue as they were walking along Route 37 with their backs toward oncoming traffic, state patrolmen reported. They are Duane, 13, Janice Mae, 10, and Gerald Adams, 8, children of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Adams.

Janice Mae suffered severe head injuries, lacerations on her left side and shock. Her sister, Duane, received several bruises on her left side. Gerald was uninjured. The two girls were taken to Marion City hospital.

*Will cost scarcely more than our average tax rate for the past 10 years. Three cents a day for the average taxpayer. Who wouldn't pay that to make Marion a city of 50,000. Vote for all 5 Bond Issues. —Ad.

Changes Proposed In GI Bill of Rights

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Dish-charged veterans will have an easier time obtaining educational and loan benefits of the GI Bill of Rights if congress adopts changes recommended by a senate subcommittee.

The main changes would:

(1) Authorize loans to buy property based on its "reasonable value" instead of "resaleable value."

(2) Permit veterans to use school funds for a "vocational course" instead of only for a "vocational course."

DAILY STEER PRICES REACH RECORD HIGH

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Two new records were written in Chicago cattle trade history last week. The average daily steer cost jumped to $17.24 Wednesday, an all-time high and only 76 cents below the limit. More than 4,500 head of choice steers brought the $19 ceiling, the largest number to bring the top in any one week. Traders said approximately six different kinds of cattle are bringing the ceiling. Good to near choice grades, which normally would sell about 50 cents or more below the strictly finished cattle, also were at the top of the market, but a confusingly uneven trade sent prices down as much as 50 cents at times.

Marion Factory Employment High, USES Records Show

Few Layoffs Since War Aside from Ferro Plant Closing; Nearly All Industries in Need of Workers.

Records in the files of the United States Employment Service show that very few layoffs have taken place in Marion since cessation of hostilities with exception of the closing of Ferro Enamel Corp. as a result of cancellation of a war contract. The layoffs affected approximately 1,200 workers, including approximately 575 male and 625 female. About 85 per cent of the male workers returned to their former employers. The remainder of the male workers were placed in other industries. Employment in the ferro plant is still in Marion has remained practically the same as during the war. The trend in six of the largest permanent industries in Marion since July is as follows:

	July 15	Oct. 1
Total Employment	3,934	3,918
Male Employment	3,265	3,319

Some turnover is taking place as a result of employers releasing workers in order to permit movement of World War II veterans to their former positions.

Few Reconversion Problems
Permanent industries in Marion experienced very few reconversion problems due to the fact that during the war they produced practically the same products for the war effort as they did during peacetime for civilian use.

Practically all industries and establishments in the Marion office area are in need of workers.

	July	August	September
Total Referrals	992	855	436
Male Referrals	618	578	347
Veteran Referrals	148	142	118
Total Placements	719	179	153
Male Placements	443	292	123
Veteran Placements	103	74	55

The demand for male workers in Marion greatly exceeds the supply, which is practically nil, the employment service reports.

There is, however, an overabundance of female workers. This is due to the fact that the majority of industries in Marion is of the heavy type in which jobs are not filled to female workers. At present the Marion office has 467 unfilled openings on file, including needs for only 30 female workers. The majority of the female openings are in service establishments such as restaurants and hotels.

At present the Marion office has on file approximately 395 active bureau of unemployment compensation claims. Of this number, approximately 40 are male claimants, 30 of whom are of advanced age and 10 are very highly skilled men for whom the local office has no openings.

3 Years As Prisoner Begun by Wainwright

In this chapter of his memoirs, Gen. Wainwright tells of the end of his career as a Jap hostage, and the beginning of more than three cruel years of life as a prisoner of war.

By GENERAL JONATHAN M. WAINWRIGHT
(Copyright 1945, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)
Installment No. 26

AFTER THE CRIMINAL REFUSAL of my Jap captors to send a message for me to President Roosevelt, appealing for food for my starving men, I was convinced that, with possibly one exception, no Jap was even a reasonable facsimile of a human being. The exception was a lieutenant named Kusomoto who was serving as a kind of superintendent of the made-over University club at Manila. He had been a discus thrower on the 1932 Japanese Olympic team which had competed in Los Angeles.

Probably at some risk to himself he sent out and bought cigarettes for us on two occasions. With some pesos I gave him he also bought me a small electric plate and a little coffee pot in which we carefully brewed the ever-diminishing coffee which Sgt. Hubert Carroll had rescued from Corregidor.

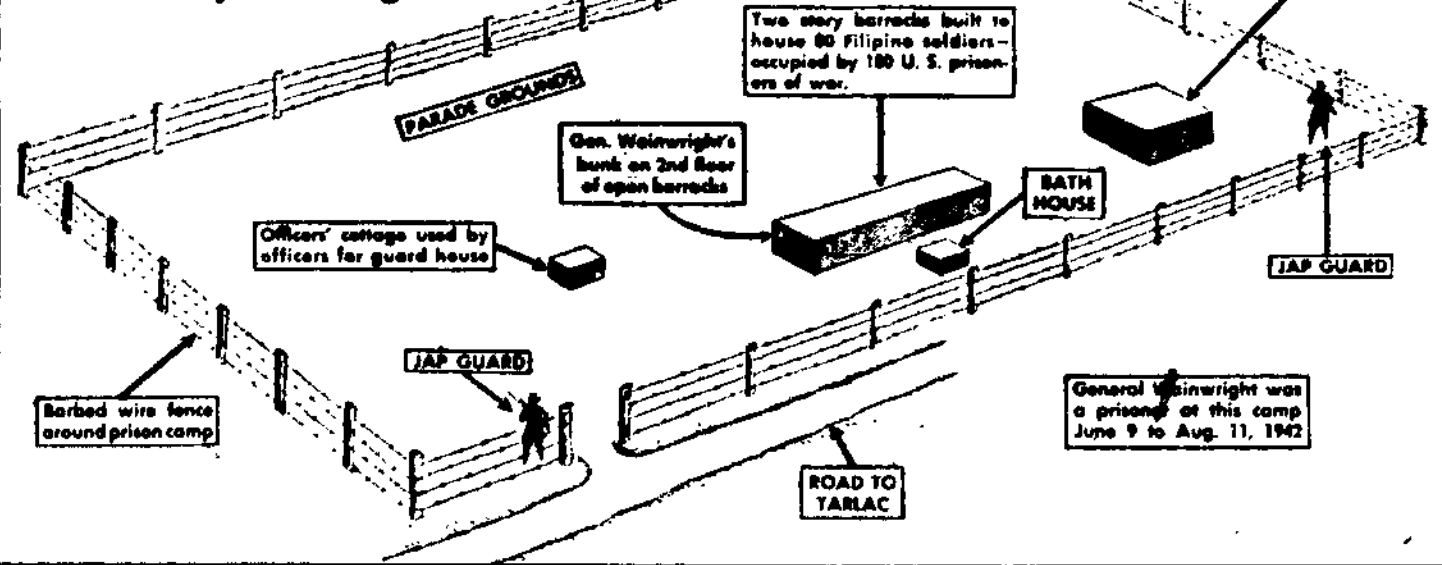

Wainwright Told He's a Prisoner

And so went our Manila stay until the morning of June 9, 1942, when the cocky little Lieut. Uramura entered my room and loudly read off a letter in Japanese from Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma's headquarters. Then he translated, and we learned that all organized resistance by my troops in the Philippines had ended.

"Your high command ceases immediately," he said, looking at me. "You are now a prisoner of war. You and your staff officers will be transported today to a prison camp for senior officers at Tarlac."

The Japs had not left us much to pack, but we bundled what we had and were led down to the street in front of the University club, where curious Filipinos gathered to stare at us.

Start Trip to Tarlac

Our baggage was thrown into a truck and we were thumbed into two cars, driven out of the city and on to Highway No. 3, which leads toward Tarlac. It was another silent ride, for we were not only passing through land we had fought for and lost, but I think all of us shared my feelings that things were going to be worse from now on.

The land of Luzon clearly showed the heavy hand of war. As we drove through the town of Angeles I was shocked at the destruction of what had been a pretty little settlement. We had left it untouched when we withdrew from it during our long trek from Lingayen Gulf to Corregidor. It must have been heavily bombed after our troops departed.

Find Other Officers There

We arrived at Tarlac at 3 p. m. that June 9 and found it as demolished as Angeles. We found also that we would not be alone. Senior officers from Camp O'Donnell and Bilbid Prison had moved into our new prison before us, including Maj. Gen. George F. Moore. The barracks to which we were assigned had once housed 80 Philippine Army trainees. But the Japs put 180 of us in there. The general officers were each given a cot, with the heads against a wall and the sides so close to one another that we had to climb over the foot. Officers below the rank of general were assigned to wooden, double-decked bunks on which were, of course, no springs or mattresses. They gave us no blankets. I had two with me, and I gave one to Brig. Gen. Lewis Beebe.

The cots and bunks were on the second floor of the little buildings. Downstairs was a small mess and two smaller rooms, one of which we turned into a hospital to care for the brutalized men from O'Donnell. The plumbingless latrine was in the yard near the barracks, but in time we built another farther from the barracks.

"Equality" Eliminated

We soon were told that we were not to consider ourselves the equal of any of our captors. We had with us two Japanese-speaking officers, Col. Wood, who had been stranded in Mindanao when the Navy plane that was taking him to Australia was wrecked, and Col. Robert Hoffman. It was to these two officers that the Japs gave the first instructions bordering on our future conduct. They spread the evil word.

If, however, we were required to bow to any passing Jap soldier, regardless of his rank or ours. If we were wearing hats we were to salute all Jap soldiers, and always had to stand at attention when one entered the barracks.

I got my first lesson in bowing from a Jap sergeant. I can still feel the wish to retch that I felt when I first was forced to do it.

On Meager Rations

The food at Tarlac was much worse than at Manila. Our diet consisted principally of rice, with an ounce or two of either pork or beef thrown in once every week or two. It was not nearly enough food to restore the health of men already weakened by the privations of Bataan and Corregidor, and subsequent imprisonment.

EVERFRESH COFFEE

FAMOUS FOR QUALITY

It is difficult for a wheat-eating people to change to rice as a staple food. A man's whole digestive system undergoes radical change. All of us suffered badly from diarrhea.

But we were able finally to persuade the Jap officer in charge of our camp to permit us to buy additional food and supplies with what money we had. The Tarlac region had been well stripped of many of its commodities, but we were able on rare occasions to augment our starvation rations with tiny and insufficient purchases of bananas, canned milk, sugar, native beans and native candies. We also set up a kind of poor man's exchange where empty shells were occasionally stocked with a few packages of Filipino cigarettes and bars of carabao soap.

Worse To Come

It seemed, and was, pathetic fare. Yet later we were to look back on it, and on Tarlac itself, as paradise.

We were required to do our own little housework at Tarlac, such as making our beds. If we had any bed-clothing to straighten, and sweeping. Many of the officers were next to barefooted, but despite many appeals we got no shoes. Instead, we lost some of our remaining belongings. The last piece of military equipment I had, my flashlight, was taken away from me in an early investigation of my luggage. Our uniforms by this time were not worth stealing.

We were able to keep clean-shaven, however, which gave us a smattering of military bearing. A colonel on Gen. Moore's staff had managed somehow to hold on to his razor shaver. He kept every blade in camp in more or less good condition. The shaving soap which Gen. MacArthur had given me the day I said goodbye to him on Corregidor also was parceled out in small dabs to those who had no such luxury.

Less Questioning

But, at least, the volume of the Jap questioning diminished at Tarlac. They made several more stabs at learning where our silver had been deposited in Manila Bay and—I learned later—got such vague and misleading answers that they wasted weeks dragging the bottom of the Bay far from where the $15,000,000 actually was.

Soon their questions, especially the military ones, became more expository than curious. In interrogating me on my tactical maneuvers on Bataan the Jap officers seemed mainly to be trying to say that their Jap army tactics were superior. They did give me some trouble, however, in trying to learn how I was able to know so many of their plans in advance. Naturally, I never revealed to them that much of that advance information had come to me by radio from a Philippine officer hiding in Manila.

Tell of Jap "Conquests"

They said, through their questions, too, that they were confident of victory in the Pacific war. It was tormenting to hear them tell of further Jap conquests, for we had no news from the outside world, no papers, radio, letters—nothing.

"You'll be home by Christmas," one of them said to me one day at Tarlac in July, 1942. "Your country cannot stay in the war much longer."

I am sure that he believed the words he was saying. The younger Jap officers and enlisted men were plainly confident by the summer of '42 that America would soon sue for peace.

Licenses for Explosives Have Been Discontinued

Issuance of individual licenses to makers, distributors and users of non-military explosives has been suspended by the department of the interior, through the bureau of mines, according to a bulletin received recently by Elmer E. Smith, clerk of courts. The general license which has replaced the individual licenses, relieves persons covered by it from the duty of securing licenses under the federal explosives act and regulations. Expiration of this license will occur when revoked by the director of the Bureau of Mines or when the regulations are of no further force.

Issuing of individual licenses has been in effect for the past three and one-half years, as a domestic wartime security measure.

Prexies Face Tough Battle Against Dover Here Friday

For Second to Newark in Central Ohio League; Harding Shows Added Spirit in Drills.

The Harding Presidents will be out gunning for their second victory of the year Friday night when they tangle with the Dover Tornadoes at Harding Stadium at 8 p. m. The Tornadoes are expected to furnish more opposition for the Prexies than was shown at them last Thursday evening. Dover came to town with a record of five wins against two defeats.

They won their first contest over Uhrichsville 7-6, lost their second game to Akron Garfield by a score of 13-6, lost their third attempt to Newark 32-6. From there on they won their next four tilts. These victories were over Coshocton 26-6, Cambridge 25-0, Zanesville 13-6 and last week they defeated Lancaster 32-0.

Dover plays second in the Central Ohio league, ranking next to Newark. The Tornado line will be weakened by the loss of Jim Judy, guard, who received a broken leg in their last week's game.

The locals at the present time are being bothered with colds. Most of the injuries which have been hampering the Prexies for the past week or so, are coming along pretty well but there are still a few which will tend to slow them down.

For the past few evenings the boys have been drilled on tackling. Also Coach Petrich has been doing a little experimenting in the backfield and he believes he has found another back. He is Gene Peardon, who has been playing a substitute since the first of the season. Petrich says he is developing rapidly but may not be ready until next week.

Last Thursday's victory over Ashland must have inspired the boys as they have been displaying more zip in their practices recently.

Petrich is not sure of his starting lineup as yet but hopes he will be able to make eleven selections by Friday.

CONN BLOWS TOP AT TUNNEY'S CRITICISM OF BOUT WITH LOUIS

Billy Calls Ex-Champ "Play-boy Admiral" in Largely Unprintable Reply.

By The Associated Press
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—Billy Conn, angry that Navy Lieut. Cmdr. Gene Tunney assailed his June title bout with Joe Louis would be a "play-boy admiral," the Philadelphia Record reported today.

Conn told the Record in a telephone interview from Pittsburgh that Tunney's charge was "ridiculous." Tunney had stated that if the Conn-Louis fight is held it "will be drastically injurious to boxing" because neither man had fought in over three years except in exhibition bouts.

The Record said "Conn's counter-thrust was unprintable," but quoted the challenger:

"It's lucky the fellows in the Army weren't like him (Tunney). He thought the war could be won by doing pushups."

Tunney, in condemning the fight, said the Pittsburgh boxer recently discharged from service "has not been a teetotaler."

"That shows how ridiculous Tunney is," Conn was quoted in the Record. "I take a little drink now and then. I don't smoke or chew. But Tunney has said if Louis smoked for six weeks he himself could beat him in this present condition."

That's a joke, Joe could smoke a week, said the Pittsburgh boxer, and still lick Tunney without any trouble.

NAVY COACH DISPELS DISCONTENT RUMORS

Says Middies' Spirit High for Notre Dame Tilt.

By The Associated Press
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 1.—Discontent which experts say has affected Navy's football playing was believed dissipated today as a team rejuvenated in spirit prepared to enter for Cleveland's Saturday tilt with undefeated Notre Dame.

Head Coach Oscar Hagberg was quoted by Hugh Trader in the Baltimore News-Post as saying he wouldn't be back at Navy next year, but he was optimistic about the outcome of the Notre Dame game.

Asked to comment on reported criticism of dissension on the Navy team, Hagberg declared: "After the Penn game, our morale is high and it gets higher as the Notre Dame battle approaches. The Middies are confident they are going to hit their stride, and when they do, they are going to look like a real team."

Trader had asked Hagberg how he felt about the T-former for next year with most of Navy's men returning. He quoted Hagberg as replying: "Well, I won't be here next year. My job is to bring the boys along for this season's finish."

Capt. C. O. Humphreys, Navy director of athletics, previously had confirmed widespread reports of low morale and discontent among Navy gridders.

"We have known there has been something wrong," he said. "And we have been trying to put a finger on it."

Concerning reports which credited Capt. Dick Duden, Navy end, with improvising plays in the last-minute rally that gave the Middies a 14-7 victory over Penn last week, Commander Hagberg said Duden did not call signals, but he did advise Quarterback Bob Hoernschemeyer to turn to a passing attack midway of the fourth quarter.

Buckeye Offense in Top Form for Wildcat Clash Saturday

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 1.—The Ohio State Buckeyes' offense appears to be in top shape today with the recovery of several injured first stringers.

Dick Fisher, right halfback who has seen limited action because of a leg injury, again is performing with his old form. Guard Warren Ameling and Tackle Russ Thomas, both ill Tuesday, have returned to the squad.

The drill yesterday centered on offense in preparation for meeting Northwestern university here Saturday.

Coach Carroll Widdoes also drilled his men on defensive plays to combat passes by Northwestern's quarterback, Jim Farrar of Cleveland.

Ticket Director Henry Taylor reported complete sellouts for the Northwestern and Illinois contests. Orders for the Michigan game have been turned back for the last two weeks, but, Taylor says (and it's his stock reply these days):

"We still have plenty of Pittsburgh tickets."

Loop-Leading Hoosiers Taking It Easy

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Indiana university, perched alone at the top of the Big Ten ladder, will keep its eyes focused on Ann Arbor and Columbus this week-end as three of four other contenders for the 1945 conference championship battle to stay in the race.

The Hoosiers entertain Cornell college of Mt. Vernon, Ia., in a non-conference contest Saturday while Purdue—tied for second place (3-1) with Ohio State—plays host to Pittsburgh. In a third non-conference battle Illinois clashes with Great Lakes at Champaign, Minnesota and Michigan, both title contenders, clash at Ann Arbor in an elimination affair. One other conference battle is slated—Wisconsin at Iowa.

The Gophers and Wolverines are expected to draw 85,000 fans to the 36th game between the two rivals. Yesterday Coach Fritz Crisler juggled his Michigan backfield seeking replacements for Joe Pansetto, injured defensive quarterback. He indicated either Don Robinson or Howard Yerges would start at the post.

At Minneapolis, Coach Bernie Bierman took his charges into the fieldhouse for the third successive day for a practice session. A brief warm-up scrimmage was held behind closed gates.

MAJOR LOOP OWNERS Irish Gun for Mid-State Loop LOOK OVER TALENT AT BASEBALL DRAFT

More Than 5,000 Eligible, But Returning Servicemen Ease Competition.

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Major league baseball owners, eyeing budding rosters for the first time since 1942, gathered today to take a look-over at more than 5,000 minor league players up for grabs in the annual draft.

But the return of servicemen to the big leagues left the magnates in a rather comfortable position insofar as manpower is concerned. There wasn't expected to be any knock-down-drag-out bidding.

Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics expressed belief there wasn't a player in the minors worth the draft price, which range from $7,500 in class AA leagues to $2,000 for class D circuit players.

The draft meeting was the first for baseball's new commissioner, A. B. Chandler, but indications were that not all of the big league owners would show up in view of the prospective dull player market.

Under the rotation system governing the player selection, first choice for any of the 5,134 on the draft list, goes to the American league eighth-place Athletics, with the tail-end National league Phillies having second choice.

Although selections will be made today, the rules permit a club to put in additional drafts up to midnight of Nov. 4. A year ago the majors selected 21 players.

High for the last 15 years was 23 in 1942, first wartime season, when the club owners were frantically grabbing for almost any player to complete their rosters. Production is increasing but it will take some time to swing over to large-scale output of civilian-type ammunition.

Nation's Athletes Did Outstanding War Job

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—The nation's college athletes, the Athletic Institute said, have made "outstanding" record in service to their country in World War II.

President Ted P. Bank of the institute said of data asked of 390 colleges, replies were returned by 98 of the students who had competed in football, basketball, track and baseball.

It showed that of 10,742 football lettermen listed, 87.7 per cent were in service when the survey was instituted last spring, 63.8 per cent won commissions, 59.4 per cent saw overseas service and 45.4 per cent were in combat service.

MAJOR LOOP OWNERS Irish Gun for Mid-State Loop Pennant at Marysville Friday

Marion St. Mary will play Marysville Friday afternoon in the big game of the season in the Mid-State loop. The crown will be given to the winner of the contest. Neither team has defeated in league competition. Marysville defeated Richmond 19-0 and Mt. Gilead 25-6. Mary, on the other hand, defeated Richmond in a scoreless tie and Mt. Gilead by a 10-0 margin.

The Irish are in pretty good shape for the tilt. There is present only one injury, this being Dick Schuler who has banged up knee. In last night's practice session the boys appear to be getting a little weary after a tough season, but they will be counted upon to play the best game they know Friday afternoon. This will be the last game of the season for seven St. Mary seniors. All seven seniors will receive a starting call in this year's drawing contest.

The boys deserve a lot of credit for the conditions under which they have been practicing this season. They are still using the rough grounds just to the north of the Lincoln park baseball diamond. Dr. Wagner also merits a pat on the back for the time he has spent with the boys this season.

The game at Marysville will get under way at 3 p. m. Friday.

Coach Andy Kerr of Colgate Practices What He Preaches

By The Associated Press
HAMILTON, N. Y.—Andy Kerr has been coaching football more than 35 years and he can't get enough of it. That's why you'll find him in the little quiet town of Hamilton, N. Y., in the office of every Colgate university practice session.
He has been here since 1929. Now, a little older and a little wiser, he never thinks of the Red Raiders without thinking of Andy. A graduate of Dickinson college, he participated in football, baseball and track. Kerr started as a high school coach in Johnstown, Pa. Then he went to Pittsburgh Central high where he was undefeated for two years. He was a coach with Pittsburgh university.
Since then he has always used Pop Warner's system although anyone who has ever seen his team in action will tell you that it's the Kerr variations that make the Colgate teams click.
The Scott's attack always features plenty of double spinners, triple reverses and combinations of the lateral and forward pass plays emphasizing deception and fast ballhandling.
So that's why Andy was caught in this pose recently showing his quarterback the correct way to get the ball started toward a touchdown. He practices what he preaches.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADLE GARRISON

"No, Georges, I'll not forget," I said, furiously conscious that every word I uttered was probably audible to Dicky in his wheel chair, and to Jack and Katharine. I was grateful that the sound of the knocker cut short the fugitive king's murmurs. My father opened the door, revealing Adama standing in the opening, and then he summoned Georges rather peremptorily.

"Time to go, lad," he said. "Put your hat and cape on."

Georges obediently donned the foreign-looking military cape which Jack had worn into the hotel, and then with his hat in his hand, he made us all a sweeping bow.

"Goodbye," he said.

"Goodbye, and good luck," I chorused, and then my father ushering him out, pausing a second in the doorway to speak to me.

"You will do what I requested soon?" he queried.

"Immediately," I said, and then the door closed, and I was left, teeming with the pairs of merry, teasing, inquisitive eyes.

"By my hildom, wench," Dicky was intoning from his wheel chair. "That I should live to see the day when I had to sit helplessly by and see a glamorous boy like Georges snubbing all over your hand. But what intrigues me even more is what he said. Were my ears functioning?" I thought. "I heard him ask you not to forget his messages to Mary."

Heard Correctly

"You heard the words correctly," I said, with the cool detachment with which I handle Dicky's teasing.

"You mean you're denbling for a Western Union messenger?" my husband demanded wrathfully. "Well, if you are, you're going to break your oath of discretion to the company pronto! You're going to divulge those messages to my niece—she is my niece, remember—and I stand in loco parentis to her—right now, as the radio announcers say."

It was impossible not to laugh at his foolery, but I deftly removed myself from his outstretched clutching hand.

"You shall hear those messages all in good time," I said sedately.

Katharine and Father already had listened to them. But Katharine, please don't tell the boys while I'm gone. I want to see Dicky's face when he hears them.

Wouldn't Rob Madge

"I wouldn't rob you of that for anything," Katharine said, as she went on, as Jack sent us when it was toward her, and her husband's abbed her with a pretentious twist, all the Gestapo tortures and a span of wild horses couldn't drag the story from me.

You see, Dicky threatened. I've picked up two or three beauties of persuaders in my researches, and I'll be off to Jack's place to see him. You'd better get a good night's sleep, my love, for I'll be back about immediately. I promised.

But I counted my chickens too soon for when I had reached the Philip Verizen apartment, and sounded the knocker, Olga who opened the door, gave an exclamation of pleasure that was almost a scream.

Did Not Dare Phone

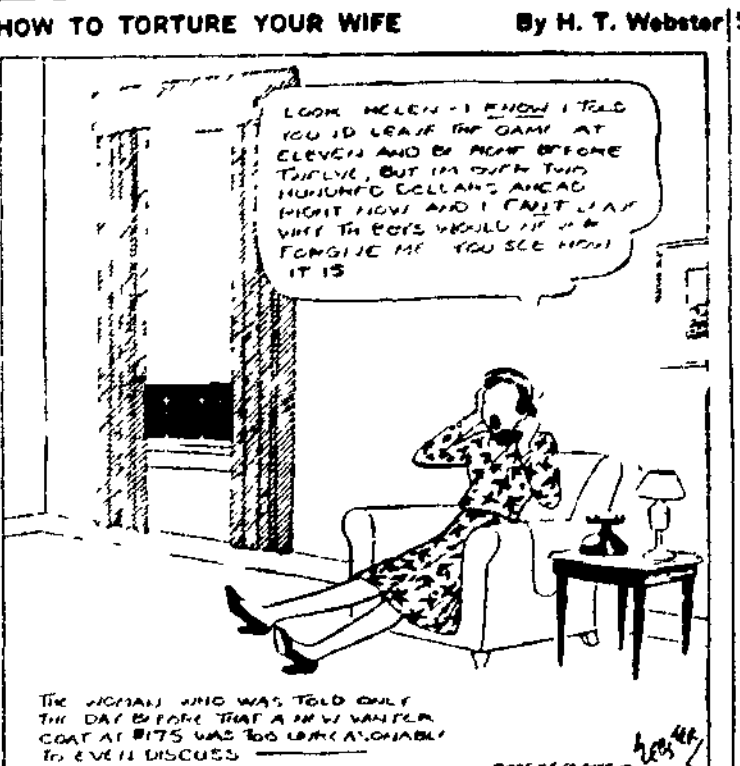

Oh, I'm so glad to see you," she cried. "I did not dare to telephone you for fear Georges had not yet gone and I did not dare to come down to your apartment for the same reason. I've been waiting for the time when you would either call or telephone."

How can I help you, Olga? I asked for her need of aid in some director was patent. My father has sent me to ask Phil a favor, and I must talk to him immediately, but once that message has been given I shall be completely at your service."

"Thank Heaven!" she exclaimed, so fervently that I was more bewildered than ever, and then she took my hand and drew me through the door.

I won't bother you now, she said. Come in and talk to Philip. I will only tell you that it is not I who wishes your aid, but Olga. She has asked to see you as soon as it possibly can be arranged.

Probate Courts Win in Ohio Litigation

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 11.—Ohio probate and juvenile courts may not be stung by refusal of county commissioners to provide sufficient money for their operation, the supreme court ruled in effect yesterday when it ordered the Vinton county commissioners to provide more funds for those courts.

In two separate actions, Probate Judge E. C. Motter asked the supreme tribunal to compel the county commissioners to appropriate $980 additional for the salaries of probate court clerks and $2,280 additional for salary and traveling expenses for a chief probation officer of the juvenile court. The court granted both requests.

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN BUNDSEN, M.D.

Heart Murmur

ONE of the questions asked frequently is: What is a heart murmur and what does it mean? As you may know, the beating of the heart causes certain sounds. If these sounds are abnormal the condition is called a murmur. The murmur may be heard when the heart contracts and is then known as a systolic murmur. If it occurs during the relaxing of the heart it is known as a diastolic murmur.

Heart murmurs may arise from a number of causes. They may be due to damage to the heart valves or to defects in other parts of the heart. Some murmurs may be due to conditions not affecting the heart itself.

When the doctor hears a heart murmur, he is confronted with the problem of finding out its cause. In order to do this, he must make a complete examination of the heart, including an X-ray, to determine if its size is increased, and an electro-cardiogram or electrical tracing of the heart beat, which also gives some indication as to whether or not the heart may be damaged.

There are certain things about heart murmurs, themselves, which may help the doctor in deciding as to their cause. Most heart murmurs, it is true, are due to damaged heart valves. The valve may be so injured that blood flows backward through it. During the healing process, scar tissue may form which narrows the opening through the valve or produces what is known as stenosis. This also will produce heart murmur.

The physician will attempt to determine where the murmur is located and whether it is heard in the arm pit, if it is the same when the patient is lying down or sitting up, or if it is influenced by breathing. He will also attempt to find if the patient has had some disease which has led to heart damage such as rheumatic fever.

In many children with heart murmurs develop but these disappear when the temperature returns to normal. Heart murmurs may also be heard in cases of tuberculosis which affect the pleural lining membrane of the chest cavity.

The thing to remember about heart murmurs then is that they indicate damage to the heart in most instances, but that the extent of the damage cannot be determined until a careful study is made by the doctor.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

S. B. What is meant by hypocalcemia? Why is it caused, and what is the remedy?

Answer: Hypocalcemia means a lack of calcium in the blood. This condition may arise from a lack of vitamin D, or a deficiency of calcium in the diet, or some disturbance of the absorption of the calcium from the intestines.

The remedy consists of taking foods rich in calcium such as milk and its products, some special vitamin "D" products and perhaps some calcium preparation such as calcium lactate.

Y. R. I am a young girl of sixteen and have bow-legs. Is there a cure for this?

Answer: It is not likely that bow-legs in a girl of sixteen can be overcome except by means of an operation. Unless your deformity is quite severe, it is not probable that such an operation would be worthwhile.

Dr. Bundsen will answer letters containing medical questions only through his column. (Copyright, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

News Behind the News
By PAUL MALLON

British Business Methods Unchanged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The British are more than one best friends in this none too friendly world.

They are in a way our grand-children's grandfathers who have fallen upon hard times, but they have put over some amazing stunts on us, always doing it in a half-hurt, half-superior sort of way, as if they had a right to our gold eye-teeth or the world's oyster.

Anyone who says wait-a-minute-lets-see-what-is-going-on here, they look upon with their infatuated air as if he were just too backward to understand, or worse, possibly anti-British. You never know whether to laugh at their obviousness, or get angry at their imposition upon your intelligence.

Not the least of their offenses against the world is what they have done in Assam, Malay theater, where native industries are being destroyed. You may not believe these inside facts, but I have them by direct, objective, provable written pipeline, and would not present them if they were not true beyond successful contradiction, to wit:

Although the natives are naked, hungry and ill the British have succeeded in imposing upon our armed forces an officially ordered restriction against leaving anything behind of benefit to the natives.

Hospitals Torn Down

Our hospitals will have to be razed to the ground, unless the British take them over for themselves. The medical supplies and equipment which the natives need so much already are being subjected to the same foolish disposition.

Believe it or not, the sun glasses of our air corps men were collected as they departed for the states, and taken out to the air strip where a steam roller was run over them. They were expensive government property of the $7.50 type.

Again, 6,000 ordnance wrist watches were destroyed within a two weeks' period by MPs. Our men were not permitted to purchase them, but if they lost one, they had to pay the purchase price.

Our soldiers were told the government had overhauled alrmen's Swiss watches during the war to keep the Swiss watchmakers from making precision instruments for the Nazis, and all this surplus must be destroyed as government property—and cannot be given to the natives or brought home for use by our men.

Three auto vehicles were stalled at a missionary rest camp due to the monsoon. The missionaries asked to buy them for the mission. Instead an officer was sent out with three sticks of TNT and destroyed them to prevent anyone from using them.

Chemicals and drugs are buried

Meaning of CBI

Burma conditions are customarily described among GIs as CBI—confusion beyond imagination, and natives are screaming to get home because they have nothing to do, as the 1,000-bed hospital in one locality has only 200 patients, but the army still carries a 1,000-bed hospital and therefore must needlessly keep a staff there equal to its full assumption.

Five troop ships came into Calcutta to take troops back to the states, six weeks or so back, but no troops were permitted to go on them. So much of a fuss was raised, one officer lost his job. We are getting the men out now, 24,000 being scheduled to leave during October, but 6,000 had to wait another month until they acquired more points. Morale is not what you would call high.

The basic British impositions certainly laugh at the four freedoms. Shades of a quart of milk a day! We cannot even have our hospitals, give medical supplies or leftover lighting or radios to the needy. We cannot give them our sunglasses or watches; indeed we cannot carry these home ourselves.

I hear one American officer did permit disposition of some of our worn-out army clothing to a few naked natives, but I hesitate to report this sensible kindness for fear he might be punished.

I was sitting in a restaurant eating dinner the night I heard the radio flash about the war declaration by revolutionaries in the Burma India area, the first of new wars being the breath of the old one died. My companions suggested the Communists might be financing opposition to the British there. I decided to investigate what was behind the matter. I found the British themselves apparently responsible rather than the Communists—our crochety, self-interested grandfathers who are dead set in their colonial and commercial ways.

No Magic in Washington

THE President's wage-price speech did not settle anything. Mr. Truman hardly could expect it to settle anything.

We are dealing with the consequences of a war boom. They are aggravated by certain attitudes, policies and political strategies of the government. The best to be hoped for under the circumstances is something a little better than we may get.

For more than a decade it has been the custom to believe Washington would find an answer for everything, but Mr. Truman has no answer for this. Of course, being a politician and also an earnest patriot who wishes he could do something, he pretends to have answers, but they don't hold water.

In one breath, he says the whole thing is up to the free competitive system, and in the next he talks about the necessity of clearing everything with the government. He speaks of give-and-take, but he proposes to do all the giving on one side and all the taking on the other side.

Mr. Truman speaks of the potentialities of mediation, reason, fairness and patience—and lashes out at Congress for having the audacity to question his judgment on such public questions as boosting unemployment compensation, the misnamed "full employment" bill and what to do with United States Employment Service. No one can blame him for being jittery about the magnitude of the country's problems, but because of their magnitude it is unlikely that Washington will be able to do anything but publicize them.

Artificial Sunlight

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Soviet scientists at Voroshilovgrad are setting up an ultraviolet ray health chamber for the mass treatment of coal miners whose work keeps them out of the sun's rays for long periods.

The apparatus consists of a corridor along which the workers slowly move on an escalator past banks of powerful lamps which expose them to rays from all sides within a few minutes.

Called "photari," the device is the Soviet Union's first and was developed by the Ukrainian Institute of Labor and Hygiene in Charkov.

Japan's Economic Feudalism
By Raymond Moley

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S order that the great Zaibatsu family combines be broken up reminds us of the supreme court's dissolution of the Standard Oil and tobacco trusts. It is easier said than done. It will take years to readjust Japan's business on the lines of a truly competitive economy.

These Japanese family businesses have followed the course of early capitalism in Europe. The Meiji family in late mediaeval Italy was an exporting, importing and banking combine with immense power. In Luther's time, two families in Augsburg, the puggers and the Waisers, owned the largest unified businesses outside of Italy. These family organizations represented the bridge between two systems—feudalism and capitalism. As capitalism developed, the more primitive outposts declined and, ultimately, disappeared as business enterprises.

Japan is an example of retarded development. Despite the modern nature of its products, its economic and political organization is three or four centuries behind our own.

Four Families in Control

Four family enterprises dominate business in Japan. The oldest of these is the Mitsu, which, in 1933, published a jubilee book marking its three-hundredth birthday. The book showed that the Mitsu combine, broken into several dozen affiliates, controlled one-third of Japan's coal export and one-third of its mines. It had a large merchant marine, as well as textile mills, electrical machinery and locomotive works. It had its own banking institutions. It financed almost exclusively the University of Commerce in Tokyo, where it educated the more important of its quarter-million employees.

The Mitsubishi was somewhat stronger than Mitsu in iron production. In the 1920's the Mitsubishi claimed 150,000 employees—a figure which greatly increased in subsequent years. The Mitsubishi banks imitated the irrelevant marble and architectural wastes of great American banks.

Held Great Power

The past strength of these and other family combines of Japan was incredible. They developed on the outskirts of the nineteenth-century world's economy. One reason for their advantage was the fact that certain countries like China could not be adequately served with great varieties of products by small or medium-sized Occidental firms, which were unable to have considerable numbers of employees resident in the receiving countries.

A European, who is now a citizen of the United States and who visited Japan in 1941, testifies that the leading members of these business families were opposed to war with us. They doubted its successful outcome. On the other hand, they were interwoven with government to such a degree that the country offered no effective opposition to the militarists.

The United States, in order to see that these enterprises serve to future war preparations, will have trouble effectuating any change in their form or organization which will not be pure sham and death. It might be better to keep them concentrated and turn over control to business and official executives of the United Nations. Our concern is to use our power directly and effectively to prevent the revival of war-making activity, not to reconstruct Japan's forms of economic life. These forms will rapidly change or a politically democratic regime will come from within, if they are to be permanent.

Warns U. S. of Catastrophe
By Walter Lippmann

WITH the President, the men who have the chief responsibility for our foreign relations are Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Vinson, Mr. Patterson and Mr. Forrestal. They must be asking themselves what is the matter with the external influence of the United States is now so much less constructive and beneficent than might reasonably—even after grandiose hopes are discounted—have been expected of the strongest and richest power on earth.

They must be aware of the mounting discouragement and dismay, and of the need to search out the causes of what is now, prospectively, a gigantic historic failure.

It is quite clear, it seems to me, that our foreign relations are not under control, that decisions of the greatest moment are being made in bits and pieces without the exercise of any sufficient over-all judgment by the President and his chief advisers acting in consultation.

This lend-lease was terminated abruptly and brutally, and the immediate postwar situation was aggravated quite unnecessarily. This was done not as a considered decision by the chief cabinet officers who have to deal with other phases of our foreign relations.

Many Contradictions

It is impossible to determine who is making our China policy and our Japanese policy. But the policy cannot have been made by the same men who are making our eastern European policy. The contradictions are too glaring between our opposition to spheres of influence and unilateralism in Europe and our insistence upon them in the Far East.

It is no less impossible to believe that the problem of the atomic bomb had been handled by men who have paused long enough to listen to the scientists who understand its nature or to thoughtful laymen who are capable of appraising its political consequences.

The fact of the matter—to put it bluntly—is that the administration is not in control of that policy. It is allowing policies to be made in the departments, and the bureaus here and there in isolated fashion, without proper recognition of the fact that our relations with Russia or Great Britain are the net result of all the decisions which we make that affect them. It would be very convenient, no doubt, if we could take each question by itself, deal with it "on its merits" or perhaps in the light of

Spitsbergen

The new global geography—a straight line is the shortest distance between two points—gives prime importance to many points on the map formerly neglected. One is Spitsbergen.

Lying halfway between the Arctic Circle and the North Pole on a line straight north from the Scandinavian peninsula, Spitsbergen has been the jumping-off place for many an expedition.

Before the age of aviation it was so valuable that its ownership never had been cleared up. After World War I, the Allied Supreme Council awarded the island to Norway. After World War II, however, Spitsbergen has been catapulted into the news by a report that Russia intends to claim it. The Soviet Union were to hold Spitsbergen air bases, it would command all air approaches from Europe and Asia to the Arctic—and in the new global geography of straight-line flying air bases on the "top of the world" would be imperative.

In September 1941 a German force from Norway occupied Spitsbergen, but was driven out by a Norwegian British-Canadian commando force. In July 1942 the Norwegian government-in-exile set up a weather station on Spitsbergen; it was raided by a German air force in September, 1943.

Russian claims to the island's 25,000 square miles will be prosecuted more vigorously if the United States and Great Britain maintain permanent bases on Iceland and Greenland. The United States pledged itself to Denmark in 1941 to stay in Greenland until danger to the security of America had passed. It pledged itself to Iceland to withdraw "on the conclusion of the present war." No further declarations have been made.

The Once Over
By H. I. PHILLIPS

Letter to a Senator Handling Atomic Bomb

DEAR SENATOR:

I like you have been named as one of the members of eleven Senators to take a look at the bomb. I am more scared than I am writing you to express the belief that you are the one who have got to concentrate on a job without regard to your radio, your newspaper, personality or the votes on time.

I have never put my complete trust in any man. I've been nervous even when he had to do as to figure out what to do about widening a tunnel, voting a new highway or putting out a fire. I've seen so many senators fumble at gravity than what the specific situation of a glass of beer would do to the human mind. I get goose pimply at the thought of coming up with the right answer on atomic bomb.

Once I know a bunch of Senators to debate three weeks whether civilization would be benefited or injured by a louder whistle on locomotive. The best they could do on this was a tie.

There is nothing worthier of your attention and I hope it will prove capable and up to the task of handling the atomic bomb, but I have a feeling it is overmatched, even conceding your deep acuity and a running start.

In fact, do not even think it a sporting proposition to send you up against the bomb, and if I may I would call the match off.

However, the bill has been passed and you and ten or eleven senators will take on the problem. No holds barred, and all I want to do is urge that you get the headlines, and let the vote fall where they may.

Remember, the atomic bomb is a tough one and you are not fooling around with a boiled egg.

Persorly, I think there should be a committee of at least twenty-five senators to handle the bomb. Ten to hold it down, ten to run for help and five to see that no newsreel camera men can along and made the committee forget everything.

B-and-B Letters
By Truman Twill

The bread-and-butter letter is written to tell the hostess the trouble she went to was noticed and is still on the guest's conscience.

It contains nothing new, but is designed to go over the same old ground once more; namely, to prove that guests are not ingrates.

The way to write a bread-and-butter letter, therefore, is to come to the point.

"This is to let you know we sure did appreciate all the trouble you went to."

In closing the letter, say it again, in reverse.

"All the trouble you went to was sure appreciated."

In between, there are a number of other things that might be mentioned. Such as the bed... "Please apologize to the dog for putting him to so much inconvenience. We do not blame him for being fond of that bed, though. It is much better than most dogs deserve. Few dogs can expect to rest their weary heads on a guest's midriff."

Food always deserves to be mentioned.

"Everything was lovely and be sure to send the recipe for the pudding. Some people in this neighborhood have been poisoning cats. They manage to kill the cat we had for the last several years and we are thinking of having them in for dinner some night real soon. By the way, doesn't that fine dog of yours ever eat pudding, ha, ha?"

People who have gone to a lot of bother sometimes like a little token of gratitude.

"Am sending a couple packages of good coffee. Am sure you will like it, as we have found there is nothing like it for making coffee. We are very fond of coffee and believe you will learn to like it as much as we do if you get acquainted with this kind of coffee."

Comments about children are in order.

"We have spoken of your children many times and marveled at their manners. They are so completely natural and unabashed. By the way, the foot is giving no more trouble, though the doctor says it may take a month or more for the pain to go away."

Naturally, an invitation should be extended.

"Be sure to come to see us real soon. We are going away for a month, you will remember, and after that the house will be torn up for papering and painting, but you are always welcome. Maybe we will have the addition built on by that time so no one will have to feel crowded."

Did You Know?

The largest collection of marine prints in the United States—5,500 of them—is located in the Mariners' Museum at Newport News, Va.

During the first six months of 1945 the Quartermaster Corps through its procuring depots placed 28,417 contracts totaling $1,665,694,000 with small business firms for food, clothing and general supplies.

Three hundred thousand pairs of canvas-top jungle boots, no longer a standard issue item, have been converted into athletic shoes for use by patients in general and convalescent Army hospitals.

Cash savings of $4,555,000 and conservation of 65,000 tons of heavy gauge steel were realized through Quartermaster Corps' reclamation of 1,822,000 55-gallon oil and gasoline drums during the first six months of 1945.
